Local Financial Advisor Attends Sudden Money® Training

Robin Young, CFP® Hones Skills, Focuses on Helping with People in Transition

[Londonderry, NH, September 24, 2008] Robin Young, CFP®, participated in a three-day training program hosted by the Sudden Money® Institute. The workshop, which was held in Jupiter Beach, Florida, focused on modeling techniques advisors can use in helping clients who are going through financial and life transitions. “When my clients are experiencing the financial impact of a major life transition, I need to be able to help them deal with their emotions as well as with the facts and figures,” says Young, a member of the Sudden Money advisor network. “Traditional financial advisory training doesn’t really address that, but the training provided by the Sudden Money Institute does.”

The Sudden Money Institute advisor network was founded by Susan Bradley, CFP®, to give seasoned professions, from all related disciplines, a place in a community dedicated to deepening the understanding of the dynamics of transitions. The institute specializes in the development of practical tools and processes designed to enhance the success of both the clients and the professionals serving them.
